

Abstract

An amplifying output apparatus equipped with a distortion canceller may help reduce harmonic distortions superimposed on output signals even if distortions appear through an amplifier, thereby enabling outputs with smaller interference signals to be obtained. The techniques may enable an amplifying apparatus to operate with a low voltage so that such an amplifying apparatus can be provided at a low cost and also that it can be integrated on one chip with other integrated circuits.